This line graph tracks the day by day totals for accepted One-Stop early votes. The general trend is a steady increase throughout the early voting period with a spike on the last two early voting days before election day. One-Stop early vote totals for both Sundays and the first two Saturdays are much lower since not all counties participated on those days. Sunday early voting accounts for the lowest participation rates among county Boards of Election.

This line graph tracks the day by day percentages for accepted One-Stop early votes broken down by race. The dotted lines show the overall share of accepted ballots across all days to highlight which days either exceed or fall short of the average. The general trend shows a pronounced decline in White voter participation on the weekends, with weekday turnout typically meeting or slightly exceeding the average. The exact opposite is true for African American voters, who show pronounced peaks in participation on the weekends, with weekday turnout typically meeting or slightly falling short of the average.
